

With the Global Agritourism Network (GAN) formed in 2023, there is an exciting opportunity to raise the profile of the network and of agritourism as a force for good by hosting a Global Agritourism Conference (GAC) in different parts of the world.

The First World Congress on Agritourism was held in Bolzano, Italy in 2018, hosted by Eurac

The selection process will take place as follows

Wednesday 15 May 2024	Initial expression of interest application form launched. Complete the form online at Expression of Interest to Host Conference - Google Forms
Wednesday 31 July 2024	Initial expression of interest applications close
Monday 9 September 2024	Launch of detailed bid process
Monday 9 December 2024	Detailed bid process closes
20-31 January 2025	Online interview process will take place
Friday 28 February 2025	Successful countries receive notification
Friday 28 March 2025	MOU with GAN signed to confirm arrangements

The Selection Process will consider the location of the Global Agritourism Conference to facilitate that it can move around continents or regions of the world, with a host country within that region.

The initial expression of interest form will capture initial details.

The tender document for the main bid will take two forms. One will be a document that addresses the criteria below; the other will be a 3-minute (maximum) video showing what the host country and venue has to offer. The following areas will be used for scoring proposals.

--	--

A detailed plan of how the conference will run and where different elements will be held. Including:

- All venues and biF1 12 Tf1 0 04k001 0

	A suitable country will be, for example, one that: Has robust expertise in agritourism, either having a government prioritising agritourism and/or an academic research base in agritourism. Monitors agritourism standing and progress (e.g., growth) or can demonstrate the impact of policies to support growth.
	A country that has a strong presence in GAN. For example, it has members attending meetings, had attended previous world conferences, or who have provided leadership and voluntary time to GAN.
	The bid should include the costs of a professional event management company or team. The bid should detail the professional team who will deliver the organisation of the conference in advance and the conference during the actual event. It should state their expertise in running other large events, case studies of previous events held.

	Either via Government support (e.g., event incentives) or via commercial sponsorship.
	Professional conference venue which can accommodate minimum 500, ideally 700 and if possible, up to 1000 delegates A venue which is set up for accommodating that number and which is used to hosting large conferences each day/week
	The bids should list hotel and other types of accommodation very close to the conference venue which can accommodate 500 to 1000 delegates. Demonstrating bed nights available either in venue connected to conference venue or very close.
	Given the global nature of the conference, the main conference venue should be close to a main hub airport and/or train station.

	Bids would have to outline an estimated full budget for 500 delegates including registration ticket cost per delegate, examples of accommodation costs, and other main budget items. While the baseline budget should be based on 500 delegates, options of what the budget looks like for more or less delegates than 500 should be demonstrated. The conference should aim to make a profit to disburse to GAN at least USD 15,000 to employ a paid support staff throughout the year. Other profit arrangements (e.g., proportional distribution) will also be considered. The profits distribution to GAN should be clearly outlined in the bid budget. The conference should include scholarships for delegates with limited resources who can contribute to the program and have much to gain from participation.
	Hosts should state their commitment to sustainability and the environment. Bids should state specific sustainable practices that will be adopted.
	State how the venue will bring local culture into the programme. This could include engagement with local authorities or organisations to understand the regional context supporting agritourism. Dedicate an evening or part of programme dedicated to local culture.

While a flavour of the country hosting the conference is welcomed, the conference should also contain some core elements for both good practice and consistency. A GAN conference handbook is being prepared with guidance for host countries.