

HISTORY DEPARTMENT COURSE OFFERINGS FOR FALL 2018

As of 4/5/18

HST 009A D2: GLOBAL HISTORY TO 1500 (90293)

This course traces the outlines of global history from the emergence of the first agricultural societies in approximately 12,000 B.C.E. to the dawn of the modern world around 1500 C.E. We will pay particular attention to the evolving economic and social foundations of human societies around the globe, to their cultural, religious, and intellectual traditions, and to the growing material and cultural interactions between them. The course will be based on lectures and class/group discussions, and will include the study of primary documents and artifacts. History 009 fulfills the Non-European Cultures requirement of the College of Arts and Sciences: it is included in the residential program for first-year students. Students enrolling in this course must be admitted to the Humanities Scholars Program.

This class offers a broad survey of European history from the seventeenth century to the present. During the semester, we will explore the significant political, cultural, social, economic, and diplomatic developments that have shaped the European consciousness in the modern period. While numerous facets of historical study are covered in this class, a primary emphasis will be placed on peoples and cultures. Along these lines, rather than focusing exclusively on military campaigns and diplomatic ma revolutionary leaders of the modern era, such as Pancho Villa and Che Guevara. It has also been home to some of the most influential and well-known revolutionary political triumphs, such as the Cuban Revolution, but also to many lesser-known and less successful revolutionary examples. Starting with the Mexican Revolution of 1910-20, we will spend the semester looking at what motivated different revolutions in the region, the consequences and outcomes of different revolutionary calls for social, economic and political change, and the influence of Latin American revolutions and revolutionary ideas throughout the world. We will also pay particular attention to the roles and participation of women, indigenous people, LGBTQ people and other traditionally underrepresented populations in the various revolutions we will study.

HST 101A HISTORY METHODS (94684)

This course has been designed with two broad goals in mind: 1) to provide sophomore level UVM history majors with an opportunity to discuss and develop a sophisticated appreciation of the dynamic and almost always highly politicized character of historical knowledge; and 2) to nurture within those students the ability to evaluate critically the methods of scholarship employed by most professional historians, as well as the ability to practice those methods successfully on their own in future history courses. Through class discussions and writing assignments, students will also fine tune their appreciation of the fundamental skills cultivated through historical thinking that are widely applicable in any professional endeavor careful analysis of evidence, logical organization of data, persuasive explanation of interpretive conclusions, and polished written expression of ideas.

is a necessity. Both Prof. Buchanan and Prof. Phelps will be involved in all aspects of the course, so it does not matter which section of the course you register for.

Concentration: History 195B/C is included in the Americas, European, and Asia/Africa/Middle East/Global categories for History majors. It counts toward the major and minor in Global Studies and European Studies.

HST 195D LOVE AND DEATH IN MODERN EUROPE (94696)

This course will focus on the fascinating history of ordinary lives. It will concern itself with such matters as what people eat, what sorts of houses they live in, what they do with unwanted children, how they work, how they smell, how they deal with disease. It will tell the story of sex, marriage, divorce, personal hygiene, and death; of witches, clothing, infanticide, Club Med vacations, and all the other elements of human existence that often get left out of history classes. We will read articles and books, write essays, and watch a couple of films.

HST 301A GRADUATE HISTORIOGRAPHY (93601)

This course provides an introduction to the study of history at the graduate level. We will explore the history of the historical profession and the development of historical scholarship using readings that focus on a variety of time periods, geographies, and themes. Students will gain experience working with multiple genres common in the historical profession, including book reviews and historiographical essays, among others. The course will also help students develop practical library and computer skills relevant to historical study. The course is both reading- and writing-intensive, and active student participation during in-class discussions is expected.
