

NEPHTC Health Equity Internship Program Agency Project Proposal

The New England Public Health Training Center serves public and nonprofit health agencies and organizations

Looking to build off a pilot project from New Hampshire using the to deliberative dialogue to engage communities in a better understanding of social isolation and possible solutions, explore the literature on community and based solutions to lessen social isolation and loneliness especially in seniors, and develop implementation plan with local partners to expand or create programs or policy change that could lessen the negative impacts of isolation in our district. The expectation is that what is learned and done in the region could be replicated in similar offices across the state.

4. What kind of student might be a good fit for this project? Note: If you have already identified a student, please provide student information here, including degree being pursued and home academic institution. Describe the types of background, skills, aptitudes most desired.

Selfmotivated, good research skills, comfortable working intergenerationally since teen and older adults face a greater burden of isolation.

5. How does this project help you gain knowledge about the BTG/EEB fit for this project?
